

THE DEATH OF EMPEROR WILLIAM.

Yesterday morning's dispatches brought the news of the death of William, Emperor of Germany. The old man was over 91 years of age, and his death has been expected in Germany for some time. He was a great ruler in every sense of the term, and beloved by his people for his humanity and fairness as well as his good life. With Bismarck for Chancellor, however, Germany was run in a warlike groove, and everything in the Empire has been subservient to the idea always kept in view by Bismarck, that Germany must maintain its position as the strongest nation in Europe at no matter what cost. The result is that the war spirit has been fostered until the nation has become a vast military camp, and the tax imposed to maintain an immense standing army has kept the masses in a state of continual poverty, which has driven thousands to migrate to this country. It is beginning to be a question in the minds of the people whether the laurels won in war really compensate for the burdens of taxation, and it is not unlikely that Germany, weary of supporting the expensive royal family, will begin to move for a change and proclaim a Republic.

The Crown Prince is in a bad way with cancer of the throat and his death is only a matter of a few days or weeks at the farthest. The death of two members of the royal family so close together provides those conditions which, to a people restless with imperial rule, are revolutionary. Should the Crown Prince follow his father, Bismarck, who really never had any popular following, will hardly be able to hold the reins of power, and civil disorders may be looked for on a large scale.

THE STOCKTON LIEBEL SUIT.

A tricky attorney in Stockton, who has for years been getting rich out of probate cases, sued the Mail when his little game was exposed. He fought the case on the baldest technicalities, and shrank from investigation. The Court ruled out about all the testimony in the Mail's favor, but there were six men on the jury who would not be befogged by the trickery of the prosecution, and voted that the charges were fully proven. The manner of managing estates of deceased persons was fully shown up. The lawyer who is not in active service, but does "just a little probate business," is the man who is reaping riches with both hands where his more honest brethren starve.

There are some lawyers who, when they get their hands on a dead man's estate, take everything in sight, hardly leaving the undertaker his fee. We believe the Stockton case will result in a law regulating procedure in such cases.

An Important Decision.

A California mining company brought suit against John Oliver to quiet title to certain lands claimed by both parties. The mining company claimed title under a mining patent issued in August, 1883. Defendant held under a patent issued by the Central Pacific Railroad Company in April 1870. The Supreme Court had decided that the title to the land in question is not vested in the railroad company under the Congressional Act to aid in the construction of railroad and telegraph lines from Missouri river to the Pacific Ocean, because in the original act all mineral lands are expressly excepted from its operation, and in the Amendatory Act it is enacted that the grant shall not include mineral lands, or any lands returned and denominated as mineral lands. Judgment was therefore rendered for plaintiff.

Henry George is said to be worth $80,000.—[Envious Democratic Editor.

Well, is there any inconsistency in that? George has long been an "anti-poverty" man. But, speaking seriously, if George is as wealthy as he is said to be, his brains earned him his competence.
